

Science Award for Obesity Research & Medical Award for Weight Management

nutrition
& santé

Nourish and Flourish

For the second consecutive year, Nutrition & Santé is supporting scientific research and health initiatives by awarding annually two prizes in the fields of obesity prevention and slimming.

Two prizes will be awarded in the year 2011: The Nutrition & Santé Science Award for Obesity Research for academic researchers and the Nutrition & Santé Medical Award for Weight Management for prescribing health professionals.

The objective of these prizes is to encourage research and initiatives in the domains of nutrition-based obesity prevention, understanding eating behaviour, weight loss, weight management and relevant nutritional therapies.

NS Science Award for Obesity Research

The Nutrition & Santé Science Award for Obesity Research is open to all academic researchers working in the following fields: nutrition-based prevention of obesity*, understanding eating behaviour, nutritional therapies for overweight individuals and understanding the cellular mechanisms that lead to obesity.

The Nutrition & Santé Science Award for Obesity Research is worth €12,000.

The prize is open to European academic researchers. The prize rewards original and broadly-applicable scientific work published in the last two years.

Applications must be drafted in English and must include the applicant's CV, a presentation of the work, a list of work and publications, the applicant's publications, a one-page summary in English of the research work and how it might be applied or developed in the future.

*The following fields are not concerned by the award: obesity-related surgery, drug strategies for preventing and treating obesity.

NS Medical Award for Weight Management

The Nutrition & Santé Medical Award for Weight Management is open to clinicians, medical specialists in nutrition, dieticians and pharmacists, who have devised practical innovative projects aiming at better understanding feeding behaviors, helping adults lose weight or preventing overweight and obesity: nutritional programs or therapies, informative and educational articles or websites, behaviors' clinical studies, etc.

The Nutrition & Santé Medical Award for Weight Management is worth €10,000.

The prize is open to European prescribing health professionals. The projects must have started within the last two years.

Applications must be drafted in English and must include a summary of the practical project and how it might be applied or developed in the future, a list of referent articles and publications, a description of the health professional's activities, and a presentation of the project drafted in the local language.

Applications should be sent (5 hard copies + an electronic file on CD) to Nutrition & Santé Awards
Camille EVRARD
2, square Pétrarque
75016 PARIS
France

For any further information, please contact info.awards@nutritionetsante.com

A full list of the rules and a description can be found on the website www.nutrition-sante-brands.com

Deadline for submissions:
September 2, 2011
Nutrition & Santé Awards Ceremony: Fall 2011

