

Correction E.E. – Devoir Type Bac STG – Décembre 2009

1-

“He finally gave me what I wanted!”, Mma Ramotwe said after entering the car. “How impolite he was to try and force us to buy a big ring when we wanted a small one!”

“He did it because it was his job and he didn’t know that you were not a showy person”, her fiancé replied embarrassed.

“He had to be kidding me to treat me like that. He was really disgraceful”, she went on in a fury.

“Listen, calm down. Forget about that bad story, will you? And think about our future”, Mr Maketoni said with a soothing voice.

If you want a diploma in sciences, appearances won’t count. The only thing which is important is what you have in your brain, i.e. your intelligence.

If a person is really stupid, they won’t get my attention even if they wear brands like Nike or Dolce & Gabbana. I prefer being with someone who has a bad look and notoriety than being with someone who looks only good from outside.

Moreover, appearances can be deceiving. For instance, Bill Gates looks like a normal person, even like a nerd. And yet, he is the one who built Microsoft. He has had a very successful life.

To sum it up, I don’t pay attention to appearances because they do not represent who we are inside.
