

'UNBREAKABLE' TRAILER

Fill in the blanks while watching the trailer:

ELIJAH : I have studied the form of _____ intimately. I've spent a _____ of my life in a _____ bed with nothing else to do but _____. I believe comics are our last link to an ancient way of passing on _____. This city has had its share of _____. I watched the aftermath of that plane _____. I watched the carnage of the _____. I watched the news waiting to hear very _____ combination of words... but they never came. Then one day I saw a news story about a _____ and I heard them: there is a sole survivor and he is miraculously _____.

I have something called Osteogenesis Imperfecta. It's a _____ disorder. I don't make this particular type of protein very well and it makes my _____ very low in density, very easy to break. I've had fifty-four breaks in my life. I have the tamest version of the disorder... Type one.

If there is _____ like me in the _____, and I'm at one end of the spectrum... Couldn't there be someone else the _____ of me, at the other end?

Someone who doesn't get _____, who doesn't get hurt like the rest of us. And he _____ doesn't even know it. A kind of person these stories are about.

A person put here to _____ the rest of us. To _____ us.

I know what's going to your _____ right now. You're searching for _____ in all this.

Not one thing (??) 131 people died so you can finally understand the _____ for which you were born. Are you ready for the _____ ?

1. How many parts are there in this trailer ? Can you give them a title ?

2. Sum them up in one sentence.

3. What does Elijah think ?

Unbreakable plot summary

David Dunn, security guard of a rugby stadium, is the sole survivor of a terrible train crash. Everybody else dies, but he survives without a scratch.

When he attends the funeral of the casualties, he finds a letter on his windshield, asking how many days of his life has he been sick. David discovers that the answer is "none", and contacts the sender of the letter, Elijah Price, the owner of a No.1 comic book antiques store.

Elijah has a serious illness, his bones are very fragile, and he wants to prove David his theory: that if there is him, a highly "breakable" man, there must be the opposite, the "unbreakable", a superhero.

David has never been sick or wounded in all his life; he can lift unimaginable weights; and he has certain superheroic powers, for example to learn people's thoughts by merely touching them. David must have a weakness too, like Superman had -- it turns out he does have one, and that weakness is water. He almost drowned once when he was a kid.

At this point, David starts to believe in Elijah's theory, and he is off to save the innocent.

Can you try to guess who Elijah is ? _____